WILSON'S ITALIAN TRIP ENDS TODAY

Receptions Everywhere Compare With Paris and London—Address at Turin—Reaches Paris Tuesday.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

En Route With President Wilson, via Turin and Paris, Jan. 6.—President Wilson concludes his historic Italian trip today with an address at Turin and will arrive in Paris for a resumption of informal peace conferences on Tuesday morning.

The receptions everywhere given the American executive in Italy compare with the warm and cordial greetings of Paris, Manchester and London.

The enthusiasm of the crowds at Genoa and Milan reached an extreme pitch.

President Wilson continues to emphasize the affectionate relations between the United States and Italy which brings a cordial response everywhere. He is reiterating his declaration that the settlement of the war must be an agreement among free peoples.

Both President and Mrs. Wilson are delighted with their Italian trip and both are bearing up well under the strain of constant traveling and the continuous round of ceremonies.

It is now believed that the president's visit to the devastated districts of France and Belgium will be postponed until after the more important peace conversations that will be commenced as soon as Mr. Wilson reaches Paris.

BOLSHEVIKI SWOOP DOWN ON RIGA

Orgy of Killing, Burning and Plundering as Terrorist Hordes Rapidly Approach Poland And Riga—British Warships Bring Reinforcements.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

London, Jan. 6.—A holocaust of street fighting is raging in the great Russian port of Riga between Bolshevik and anti-Bolshevik troops, said a Copenhagen dispatch to the Daily Mail today.

Bolshevik armies are approaching both Vilna and Grodno, in their march into Poland.

Reinforcements of anti-Bolshevik soldiers are being convoyed down the Baltic by British warships.

Copenhagen, Jan. 6.—A "fearful situation exists at Riga.

Three hundred international fugitives, who arrived here today on the British armed liner Princess Margaret, declared that bands of Bolsheviki are ravaging the country about Riga, killing, burning and plundering.

These were the last fugitives to leave Riga. At the moment of their departure a strong, well organized force of Bolshevik troops, led by old system officers, had reached Riga but had not yet occupied the city.

LIEBKNECHT SEES BLOODSHED COMING

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Copenhagen, Jan. 6.—"We must prepare for bloodshed," declared Karl Liebknecht, leader of the German Radicals, in a speech in Berlin on Sunday afternoon, according to a dispatch to the Politiken today.

Ten thousand Extremists attended the meeting.

The dismissal of Eichorn, the Spartacide chief of police at Berlin, has created immense excitement among the Socialist Independents and the Spartacides.

Thousands of persons, attracted by the undercurrent of excitement and the fine weather, thronged the streets of the German capital all day Sunday.

In his speech Liebknecht attacked Chancellor Ebert, Philip Scheidemann and Herr Ernst, the new chief of police.

London, Jan. 6.—Riots, led by the Spartacides were reported to Berlin from all parts of Germany, the Berlin correspondent of the Daily Mail telegraphed today.

In Hamburg soldiers supporting the government turned machine guns upon the rioters.

Nine persons were wounded in fighting at Munich.

Rioters began looting in Berlin.

The Exchange Telegraph's correspondent at Copenhagen learns that the Spartacides in Germany have received large sums from the Russian Bolsheviki to finance the movement in Germany. More than 1,000,000 marks have been contributed for arms and ammunition in Berlin.

Eichorn, former Berlin chief of police, is refusing to accept dismissal, the dispatch added.

Deputy Kautky, a member of the German reichstag, was reported in another Exchange Telegraph dispatch as saying that Herr Liebknecht admitted that Lenine, the Bolshevik premier in Russia, had promised the Spartacus group food for 300,000 soldiers for a common fight against capitalism.

AQUEDUCT GUARDS RELEASED JAN. 2

All the New York State Guard that have been doing patrol duty along the New York water works line from Brown's Station to Westchester county, have been discharged from service. The men in this section were paid off January 2, and left for their homes. Gatetenders, regular watchmen and Board of Water Works police will continue looking after protection to the Ashokan dam and aqueduct line.

Officers of the Aqueduct Guard citizens' committee, with which many persons of wealth and prominence were identified, announced Saturday that it had completed its relief-work for the soldiers guarding New York city's water works from Yonkers to Ashokan, and was now dissolved. This announcement was made following a general committee meeting attended by several distinguished members.

The committee, with which James Speyer, Alton B. Parker, Stuyvesant Fish, V. Everit Macy, David T. Davis, William Church Osborn and others having country homes along the route of the aqueduct are connected, had done much to safeguard lives, health and morale of officers and men of the First Provisional Regiment, N. Y. N. G., since last July.

Treasurer Speyer's report shows that of the $5,025 donated the total expenses so far have been about $2,300. A special committee, comprising Judge Parker, Mr. Speyer, Mr. Davis and Captain Charles Baldwin, was authorized to assist in getting up a memorial book of the regiment and to help defray the expense.

SHOULD REPORT DIPHTHERIA CASES

Slack Isolation Measures Partly Responsible for Spread of Disease Here—Forty-Two Cases Now Under Quarantine.

That there are a number of diphtheria cases in this city is evident as an interview with Acting Health Officer Henry Van Hoevenberg, had by a reporter of The Freeman this morning, will show. When Dr. Van Hoevenberg was asked if the report current that there was a diphtheria epidemic in this city was true, he said: "Yes, to a certain extent. There are 42 cases of diptheria under quarantine and five deaths have occurred from the disease since September 1st, and new cases are appearing every day. The public in general, and particularly parents of children ill with the disease, do not realize that a diptheria case continues to be a menace to others after the acute illness and sore throat had disappeared. Diphtheria germs remain in the throat often for a long period after the patient is apparently well: such a child can communicate it to others. In order to determine when a case can be safely released from quarantine, cultures are taken from the throat: when two successive cultures, twenty-four hours apart, show that diphtheria bacilli have disappeared, the quarantine is lifted. This is modern practice everywhere. Just as long as diphtheria bacilli are found treatment is necessary. The disregard of this has caused the present situation. Parents, in far too many cases, as soon as the child has gotten out of bed, have stopped treatment, allowed the patient to mingle with others, and have removed quarantine placards, with every culture taken showing diphtheria bacilli still present. Instead of having patient treated until safe they have telephoned to the board of health, complaining that they are kept in quarantine unnecessarily. Other members of the family often become "carriers" without themselves becoming ill, particularly, in instances where there has been no attempt at isolation of the patient.

In one instance a family moved from a quarantined house without first obtaining a permit from the board of health. Several instances have been found of cases not reported by physicians, although the family had been told the case was diphtheria. The law is quite explicit on this point, physicians and parent both being liable. (Public health law, Sec. 25; Sanitary Code, Reg. 2 and 5). When no physician is in attendance, both the public health law, Sec. 25, and the Sanitary Code Regulation, 5, make it the duty of the head of the family to report to the board of health the occurrence of any case of communicable disease. In one case, only a few days ago, a public funeral was held in a house where a child is still sick with the diphtheria."

IN THE SERVICE OF OUR COUNTRY

PRIVATE LINCOLN JOSLIN

A resident of Branch, town of Denning, a nephew of Seth Jocelyn, of the sheriff's office. He was called in the draft from Division No. 3, being called to the colors July 23, 1918, sailed for France September 1, arriving September 12 and arrived at a camp one mile from Bordeaux on September 14. Before sailing Private Joslin was trained at Camp Dix, N. J. His address is 312 Ammunition Train, 87th Division, Co. D, American Expeditionary Forces, France. He has a brother, Grant Joslin, also a drafted man, who has been in the thick of the fighting, being a member of the 77th Division, and was in the last big battle when the armistice was declared. Another nephew of Seth Jocelyn, a sister's son, is also in France, and was gassed while fighting the Huns.

Ernest Osterhoudt, machinist mate on the U. S. S. K. I. Luckenbach, spent a few days' furlough with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. V. Osterhoudt, 526 Delaware avenue.

Private Joseph J. Sullivan, who volunteered to go with the last contingent of drafted men in September, has been honorably discharged from Camp Jackson. He is a brother of James and Henry Sullivan of 29 Rogers street.

Private George L. Zelie, of Green street, who was a drafted man and has been in Camp Jackson, S. C., for some time, has been discharged from the army service. He was pressman on the Daily Leader when inducted into service.

William H. Lowe, engineman, second class, of the U. S. S. Pennsylvania, which has just returned from Brest, France, from convoying the George Washington, on which President Wilson and his peace party sailed, is spending a fifteen days' furlough at the home of his uncle, at 44 Tompkins street. Mr. Lowe reports having had a fine time crossing the pond and also at Brest, although he only had a few hours there, but was overjoyed when he arrived back again to the good old U. S. A.

Mrs. C. Edward DuBois, of 64 Prince street, a few days ago received a short letter from her son, William B. DuBois, from France, stating "I am still alive and expect to be home soon." He is a private in Co. A, 317th Machine Gun Co., Battery N, and is a brother of Robert F. and Edward DuBois, of Co. E, 107th Infantry, 27th Division, who were in the big drives with the Huns. Among other things he writes: "I can't go and see Bob because he is three hundred miles away from where I am. Well, mother, the last battle I was in I came out lucky. We lost about 1,200 men. We fought to the last hour. The war stopped on November 11th at 11 o'clock, and we got orders to stop firing at 11 o'clock and we were pushing the Hun back fast. Well, mother, I will close now, as I want to get this letter off. Will see you all before long. With love to all,

WILL."

DAZZIO'S FRIENDS TO HIS RESCUE

But for the timely arrival on the scene of some of the friends of Vincenzo Dazzio of Pattaff, street, he would have been tried in police court this morning on a charge of defrauding Mr. Cole who has a grocery store in that vicinity, out of a grocery bill. The friends raised the amount of the bill, and as Dazzio has spent two weeks in jail Judge Schirick allowed the complaint to be withdrawn on the payment of the $3 fee. It was also brought out that Dazzio owes Mrs. Anna Mott about $20 for rent, but Dazzio has been promised a job by his friends who will deduct so much a week from his wages to [illegible] the [illegible].

One of Most Potent and Picturesque Figures in American History Succumbs at Oyster Bay Home Early This Morning—Death Came In Sleep as Result of Ailment Brought on by Blood Infection Sustained in South America—His Many Great Achievements During a Strenuous Life.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Oyster Bay, Jan. 6.—Colonel Theodore Roosevelt, former president of the United States and one of the most picturesque and forceful figures in American public life, died at his world famous country home at Sagamore Hill, at 4:15 o'clock this morning.

The former president is reported to have died in his sleep from embolism—a blood clot affecting the passage of blood through the heart—superinduced by a number of maladies from which he has recently been a sufferer. A complication of diseases, born of an exploring expedition into the wilds of South America, is believed to have been the cause of death.

During the past eighteen months the former president had been treated by the foremost surgeons and medical men of the country; but the malady baffled the skill of the scientists.

It is believed that the death of his youngest son, Quentin, who was killed in France a few months ago, during a battle in the air with German battle pilots affected the former president deeply and hastened his end.

Mrs. Roosevelt and Mrs. Douglas Robinson, sister of the former president, are reported to be prostrated.

The beginning of Mr. Roosevelt's indisposition came shortly after his exploring expedition into the wilds of South America, where he is believed to have contracted the peculiar malady which challenged the skill of American surgeons and physicians.

About a year ago the former president went to Roosevelt hospital and had a series of operations performed, principally in the region of the mastoid process, where a number of malignant ulcers had formed. After a long siege the doctors stated that the condition was corrected, but that they could not guarantee a permanent cure.

From that time onward the former president has suffered almost constantly from one affection or another. At one time it was reported that the abscess had appeared in both buttocks and another time in the region of the kidneys. It is believed that Mr. Roosevelt's system was filled with poison during the South American expedition.

Telegrams have been sent from the Roosevelt home notifying relatives and friends of the colonel's death.

Many of the relatives and friends are already on their way to Sagamore Hill.

Oyster Bay residents were deeply affected when the news of the colonel's death became known. The colonel's death was the principal topic of conversation on the streets. There were tears in the eyes of many persons as they spoke.

The following statement was given out by Dr. G. W. Faller, of Oyster Bay, the physician who last saw the colonel:

"Colonel Roosevelt retired at 12 o'clock last night feeling much better. At 4:15 o'clock this morning he simply ceased to breathe. Death was caused probably by a pulmonary embolism."

The funeral probably will be held Wednesday from Christ Episcopal Church, Oyster Bay. Burial will be in the Young Memorial cemetery, Oyster Bay Cove.

Colonel Theodore Roosevelt, statesman, soldier and author, and the twenty-sixth president of the United States, was the most spectacular and picturesque figure that ever appeared upon the stage of American public life.

For upwards of thirty years Colonel Roosevelt was in the public eye in one role or another and he was perhaps the best known man of his day. A man of tremendous personality, his magnetism won him a host of followers who stuck by him through the ups and downs of his long and historic political career.

Colonel Roosevelt was born in New York city on October 27, 1858, being the second son of Theodore Roosevelt, a merchant and philanthropist. The colonel could trace his American ancestry back to 1644 when the first of the Roosevelt family came to this country from Holland.

Colonel Roosevelt turned to politics as soon as he had been graduated from Harvard in 1880 and his aptitude for public life made itself apparent at once. He worked his way through the New York state assembly and the governorship to the vice-presidency of the United States and finally became the twenty-sixth president in 1901. The colonel was not elected to his first tenure of the presidency, having succeeded President McKinley when the latter was assassinated by an anarchist in Buffalo. But in 1904 he was elected president as the popular choice of the people.

The early years of the former president were those of a weak and sickly child but by the sheer dominancy of his own will he overcame physical weakness and grew into a sturdy man.

In 1884 Colonel Roosevelt went west for the double purpose of benefiting his health and of studying nature. Outdoor life had always appealed to Roosevelt so he went to North Dakota on the Little Missouri, and there gathered materials for a number of books on western life.

Not content with the work of a single ranch, Colonel Roosevelt took over two cattle ranges, the "Chimney Butte" and the "Elkhorn." Those were still the days of Indians, bad men and buffaloes and it was a good field to develop the strenuosity which the colonel used to such good advantage when he returned to the east and engaged in politics.

Colonel Roosevelt was married twice. His first wife was Miss Alice Hathaway Lee, to whom he was united on October 27, 1880. She died four years later.

Two years later Colonel Roosevelt married Miss Edith Carew in London.

After his two years of ranch life and his return east Colonel Roosevelt ran for mayor of New York city. There was a coalition of parties against him, but the colonel put up such a fight that his opponents had a difficult time in defeating him.

From 1889 to 1895 the colonel was civil service commissioner. From 1895 to 1897 he was police commissioner of New York city, a post in which he greatly distinguished himself.

When the Spanish-American war broke out in 1898 Colonel Roosevelt was assistant secretary of the navy, but he resigned this post to organize the First United States cavalry, popularly known as the Rough Riders.

The colonel, with the assistance of General Leonard Wood drew together a body of western fighters and broncho busters which was one of the most unique army units the world has ever seen. The regiment was organized at San Antonio, Texas, from May 9 to May 20, 1898, and on June 3 it arrived at Tampa, Fla., with Roosevelt serving as lieutenant colonel. As it was about to board a transport for Cuba a lieutenant colonel in command of regulars (a rank taking precedent over Roosevelt's) ordered the Rough Riders aside.

A series of parleys were begun between the two officers while the transport was coming in which gave the Rough Riders time to hold their places. Finally when the ship came near enough the colonel shouted to Colonel Wood, who was on board. Without knowing what Wood's answer was, the colonel ran back to the regular officer and said he had been ordered by his superior to hold the pier. As a result the Rough Riders got on board and reached Cuba on June 22.

Two days later the first engagement took place with the Spaniards at Las Guasimas. The gallantry shown by the men in the jungle fighting and leadership shown by Roosevelt won distinction for both and promotion to colonel for the latter.

Then came the engagements at San Juan and El Caney. In the former fight the colonel waited impatiently for orders to advance and when none came he gave the command to advance and the troops swept over Kettle Hill and up the slope of San Juan Hill under a galling fire. The criticism which was aroused at the time was quickly overshadowed by the brilliancy of the action.

The regiment returned to the states, arriving at New York in August, 1898. Colonel Roosevelt found himself a popular hero and his men the idols of the country. The colonel and his fighters were mustered out the following month.

Plunging into politics again Roosevelt was elected governor of New York state holding that office from January 1, 1899, to December 31, 1900. Colonel Roosevelt became the running mate of William McKinley and they were swept into office on November 6, 1900, as president and vice-president.

When Colonel Roosevelt ran for president on his own ticket in 1904 he was given the largest popular majority ever accorded a candidate.

American statesmen were willing to admit that Colonel Roosevelt picked his own successor when he left the White House—former Secretary of War William H. Taft.

During the next four years a [illegible] broke out in the Republican party, liberal ranks and the Progressive party was formed, largely through Colonel Roosevelt's efforts.

But in the meantime Colonel Roosevelt went to South Africa on a hunting tour. When he returned in 1910 there was talk of running him for president for a third term but the colonel frowned down the idea. Instead, he interested himself in New York state politics and brought about the nomination of Henry L. Stinson as governor against the wishes of William Barnes, Jr., of Albany, the recognized leader of the Republicans in New York state. Stinson was defeated which was the first sign that the former president's popularity and his grip upon the public were weakening.

Colonel Roosevelt then turned towards literary work, but it was apparent that he was utilizing this for political purposes.

Late in 1911 and early in 1912 Colonel Roosevelt took up politics actively again, turning against his old friend, Mr. Taft.

Finally upon the receipt of a letter signed by seven governors Colonel Roosevelt became a candidate and a political storm of immense proportions broke.

The national Republican convention was held in Chicago. It was a bitterly contested fight from start to finish. When it became evident that a majority of the delegates were going to support Taft, the Roosevelt supporters withdrew and the Progressive or "Bull Moose" convention was held. Colonel Roosevelt was nominated for president and Hiram Johnson, of California, for vice-president.

The Progressives made a phenomenal fight, with the result that the regular Republican candidate and Colonel Roosevelt were both defeated and Woodrow Wilson was elected for his first term.

In 1914 the great war came and Colonel Roosevelt at once turned his intensive attentions from politics to war. The colonel was among the first to advocate American intervention and wrote a number of scathing attacks upon the policy of the American government.

It was during the colonel's campaign for president on the Progressive ticket that an attempt was made to assassinate him in Milwaukee. He was shot and slightly wounded by a fanatic, but quickly recovered.

When this country declared war on Germany in April, 1917, a movement was started to send the colonel to France as the head of a division, but the administration declined to permit. However, four of the colonel's sons went into active service on the Allied side. They were Quentin, who lost his life while in the air service of the American army; Kermit, who joined the British army but was later transferred to the American army; Archibald and Theodore, Jr. There are two other children, Alice, the wife of Nicholas Longworth of Cincinnati, and Ethel, now Mrs. Richard Derby, of New York.

The colonel's wife survives him, also.

During his long years in public life but notably while he was president, Colonel Roosevelt was noted for the "strenuous life."

Not long ago the fact was disclosed that he was blinded in one eye while boxing with a young artillery officer at the White House. He was an ardent tennis player and the "tennis cabinet" at Washington was famous.

Former President Roosevelt was a man of wide learning and numerous institutions of learning had conferred degrees upon him, both here and abroad. He was the recipient of the Nobel prize of $40,000 for peace.

In the same year Colonel Roosevelt acted as the special ambassador of the United States at the funeral of King Edward VII of England in London.

The years which Colonel Roosevelt spent in the White House were [illegible] at times but the then president will never happier than when in the thick of a fight. Scarcely had the colonel taken his seat when the welfare of the country was threatened by a general strike of anthracite coal miners. He set a precedent for American executives [illegible] the [illegible] parties [illegible] forcing them to accept arbitration. It [illegible] but it saved the country from a serious situation. PRIVATE DUBOIS IS NOW SERGEANT

Raymond E. DuBois Writes Interesting Letter From France—Likes American Engines Better Than French.

Raymond E DuBois, one of the engine experts of the Canfield Supply Company, who has been in France assembling motor trucks, has been promoted to sergeant, and writes to his old home company as follows:

St. Vincent de Paul,
Dec. 9th, 18.

Mr Kingman,
c o Canfield Supply Co.,
Kingston, N. Y.

Dear Sir.

Received your most welcome letter and can't express how glad I was to hear from you. Glad everything is going so fine and hope it continues.

I have been mechanic here, assembling trucks and cars and repairing same. Certainly had some experiences here. Wonderful how small a crate or box they can pack a big five ton truck. We have most all makes here, so we put any of them together. Lots of "Lizzies" over here and it takes "Henry Ford" to show them in how small a case he can pack two Fords Been beyond explanation to tell all that Uncle Sam has done in so short a time He certainly saved the life of things over here

Certainly this war has opened the French people's eyes and they are talking of using the small tractor and what wonderful work they will do Certainly our New Way has got it all over any French make of engine that I have seen and I look them all over very closely. You know I'm anxious to learn anything new or especially anything that runs by gasoline All French farm machinery is behind ours and if they saw half our great machines, well they certainly would prefer the United States machines as ours are so much simpler and better constructed

Some beautiful homes here, but they all need a Kingstonian Water System for they have none here

Glad to hear you have such a good man on truck and hope [illegible] keeps on doing so well We have lots ahead of us here to do yet. [illegible] have rumors we may soon return home I hope they are true so that I can soon return to my dear home.

Hope you have the best of luck in our War Chest work. I know that you are doing your very best

I had a great trip up the line before the armistice was signed, with [illegible] and wish I could explain all [illegible] will have to wait until I return

I suppose by the time you receive this there will be snow there. No snow here but lots of rain and the [illegible] is fierce. I have felt fine practically all the time and have gained [illegible]. We are all used good for [illegible] life

Discharging The Editor

By UNA BARLOWE

(Copyright, 1918, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

It was the third time within two days that Olive Claggett had called in the office of Bennett Stokes, the managing editor, and she was well aware that her resulting feeling of embarrassment was caused by something more than the fact that she had come on an errand, the desired result of which would be most unfavorable to Bennett Stokes.

The "something more" Olive had felt always when in Bennett's presence from the first day she met him. It was this that made her on all occasions go out of her way to avoid him For Olive Claggett convinced herself that she had not the slightest desire to fall under the sway of such fascination as Bennett might exert over her.

Her newly acquired job as business manager of the Morning Banner was far too important to be imperiled by any such distractions. But now she had come entirely in the interests of the Banner—she had been delegated to go by those who she felt had the interests of the Banner most at heart.

She had asked for an interview with Mr Fordyce, the owner of the Banner. But he was away.

"You told me, you know, that you would be able to tell me something definite by this time," Olive said with distinctness, trying to avoid the smile that crept into Bennett's gray eyes "If he is not in town and won't be, I will find it worth while to go to him You ought at least to tell me where he is to be found."

"Yes, quite so," mused Bennett, turning over with a tinge of embarrassment some manuscript that lay half read on his editorial desk. "That would at least seem fair—but the fact is that Fordyce is an odd sort of fellow Hasn't personally visited the office for I'm sure I don't know how long Suppose you write a letter to him and I'll see that it gets to him"

Stokes had already made this suggestion, which had met with Olive's disapproval, but the matter was important. The entire success of the Banner depended on laying her proposition before Mr. Fordyce without delay, so with an expression that made it quite apparent to Bennett that she held him personally responsible for the inaccessibility of their chief she withdrew, promising to have the letter ready before the evening was over.

It was a harder letter to write than even Olive had anticipated, but as business manager of a morning paper she had no pressing duties at that time, and while the editorial force and compositors and pressmen were working under the grim concentration necessary to [illegible] so unpretentious a paper [illegible] the Morning Banner, she was [illegible] composing the [illegible] [illegible] until the paper was well [illegible] the composing room [illegible] sought Mr. Stokes in his [illegible] She had thought twice before she had sealed the envelope—and then she had sealed it.

After all, there was no reason why she should leave it open, she was asking Stokes no personal favor in seeing that it was addressed and if he did read it—but something assured her that Mr. Stokes was too honorable for that.

"Won't you wait just two or three minutes—till I get my desk cleared?" he said as she turned to leave the room. "I wish I might walk home with you. It is rather late."

"Thank you, no," Olive said in spite of a desire that was strong within her. "I am going with one of the girls—we are quite used to it, you know."

Bennett waited only till Olive had got halfway down the corridor; then he arose quietly pushed the door shut, returned to his desk and deliberately broke open the sealed flap of the letter to Mr. Fordyce.

The proposition was clearly put. It was not Olive's proposition, but one that had been formulated by the entire staff of the Banner, save, of course, Mr. Stokes, who had always failed to attend the weekly meetings of the personnel of the paper. Now, as every one knew, the Morning Banner had been especially hard hit by the draft.

Composed as it was almost entirely of young college graduates, who sought this way to receive their newspaper apprenticeship, a dozen or so of the most active men in editorial and business departments had gone off with the first call. Results would have been dire indeed had it not been for the women who pluckily filled in the places higher up, calling other women to take their recently abandoned subordinate places.

Olive herself had been right-hand "man" to the business manager, but when he enlisted she shifted into his vacant chair and had worked with eagerness and complete devotion for the Banner. The editorial staff had been so hard hit that no one remained but Mr. Stokes; all his reporters and assistants were women.

The constant going off of men in the composing room and pressroom suggested getting women in to do the work. It had been tried successfully by another paper. In fact Olive told Mr. Fordyce in the letter that she had investigated this and would guarantee the entire satisfaction of a feminine composing and pressroom.

Now as matters stood the munitions of the Banner worked a little in its disfavor. But it had been determined that if the paper could be made entirely woman-run the achievement would be so novel that the Banner would immediately become a paper of nation-wide distinction. [illegible] would be eager for it, it would be watched and quoted, and even joked about, but all that would help the circulation and the advertising. If Mr. [illegible] would agree heartily on the proposition, would he please discharge the managing editor?

The young woman who was now the city editor was really qualified for the job. The few remaining males who now worked as office boys and shipping clerks could be easily replaced by women and a new era would open for the Banner—the Banner would become famous the world over as a paper run entirely by women.

Bennett Stokes read the letter twice, then he looked intently at the begrimed ceiling of his office and lighted his pipe. Then he laughed a little grimly, replaced the letter in its torn envelope, put it in his pocket and stepped quietly to the door, opened it and looked first to the left then to the right. At the right he encountered the eyes of Olive Claggett standing a few feet away.

"I couldn't help but see," she said. "Mr. Stokes, I didn't believe you were capable of doing such a thing."

Then with a sudden [illegible] Bennett blocked the passage as Olive tried to force her way by.

"Good night," she said "I hope when you are quite through with Mr. Fordyce's letter you will forward it to him." By this time Bennett had two strong hands on Olive's wrists and was guiding her, in spite of herself into the room. He closed the door behind them and ordered her rather than asked her to take a chair.

"I'm not going to discuss the letter now," he said "The idea's a good one, but I'm the king's best [illegible] [illegible]. Ever since you've been [illegible] Miss Claggett, you have avoided me and I have [illegible] the fact that you bore me a grudge—and the [illegible] is that I've been curiously drawn to you. It's one of those things that a man can't help—that sort of foreordained witchery of one woman I'm not blaming you—heaven knows you have fought against [illegible] it if you ever were aware that you had it. I'm simply asking you to tell me the cause for your antipathy."

"But it wasn't my idea to ask for your resignation," Olive said. In spite of herself she felt hot tears welling into her eyes. "I shall miss you very, very much—more than you can possibly know. I wrote the letter because I was delegated to do so, and I knew my duty was first to the Banner. Besides, there are bigger things for you to do." And then the business manager broke down completely, and, burying her face first on the side of Bennett's desk, and then, as he gently raised it on the rough exterior of the shoulder of the editorial office coat, she said exactly what she had determined never to [illegible] [illegible] that she herself felt a strange and compelling attraction to Bennett.

"And when that sort of attraction is mutual there is only one thing to do," Bennett was saying, "there is no longer any question as to the success of the marriage."

There was a knock on the editorial door and the [illegible] of the [illegible] [illegible] Bennett's [illegible], called [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]. "Olive, I thought you were coming."

Olive [illegible] rose to go, with a look of a guilty [illegible].

"But what will I tell them about Mr. Fordyce and the letter?"

"Oh, they'd [illegible] as well know," he said. "I'm Mr. Fordyce. Running small town papers is a foolish kind of amusement, and then they [illegible] done it and good luck to them—but they must name a new business manager."

HIGHER THAN MERE BRAVERY

Soldier's Decoration Conferred as Reward for Assuaging the Thirst of Emperor Napoleon.

There is a good story of one of Bonaparte's [illegible], who, after the distribution of medals of the Legion of Honor, which he expected but did not receive, could contain himself no longer and went to the emperor to demand satisfaction.

"Do you not remember, sire," he asked, "that when we were in Egypt and you were thirsty I [illegible] had a melon, which I [illegible] with you?"

The emperor smiled, saying, "I thank you [illegible], my good man, but giving a melon to [illegible] [illegible] does not necessarily rate as the cross [illegible]."

The soldier [illegible] famous speech: "And was I not at Arcola at Marengo and Austerlitz? Did I not go to Santo [illegible] and [illegible] myself with glory in every battle? Yet you cannot remember a melon!" [illegible]

The emperor smiled again. "Why did you not tell me all that before?" he [illegible]. "Of course you shall have your cross."

"But is it for the battles or for the melon?" the soldier [illegible]. "[illegible] food can go into battle, but not every man can give a melon to his general when his general is thirsty."

"Quite so," remarked the emperor laughing and taking [illegible] cross from his own breast, he pinned [illegible] on the coat of [illegible]. "[illegible] for the melon!" he said.

HOW MATCH FIGURES IN WAR

Scarcity of Brimstone-Headed Sticks Results in Special Controller Being Named in England.

No commodity has had more adventures than the match. The announcement of the appointment of a special controller all to itself is a fitting climax to a checkered history, says the Manchester Guardian. In the memory of our grandparents the cumbrous "Prometheans" that sought to displace flint and steel were a high-priced luxury impossible to the poor.

In the memory of our fathers Henry George, for one, condemned the match as one of the articles that were "too cheap." He had in mind, of course, the sweating and the poisoning of workers that for too long went to the making of cheap matches.

Yet the popular insistence on cheap matches turned out of office a British chancellor of the exchequer and coined an immortal epigram; and the superiority of the matches that can normally be bought in this country over the flimsy, lifeless, expensive sorts sold across the channel under government control has given the free-trader one of his most handy and incontestable arguments. The British match must now suffer control.

Such matches as there are will be fairly apportioned at fixed prices. We do not doubt that there will be enough to go round, for, faced with a famine in some classes and with loose matches at 20 for a penny in others, people have already begun to make that economy in consumption which, with no greater sacrifice than a little care, might easily save a half of the matches burned.

One Reason Girls Steal.

This bit of philosophy of a reformed girl thief was contained in an article in the People's Home Journal on the value of the probation law: "A girl can no more live without a few pleasures and pretty possessions than she can without food. Take it from me, girls don't want to steal. If they knew how to earn things for themselves, they wouldn't be bad. Some day there'll be a way found for girls to earn what they need before they get into trouble, not after. Then the whole world'll be different."

Marriage Custom.

The women in all [illegible] in Sandwich [illegible] names on the marriage day as a Roman custom. For example, we have [illegible] of [illegible], meaning Ocenia wife of [illegible]. Now we omit the "of."

In the east, as a general rule, Turks wear yellow slippers, Armenians red and Jews blue.

FATHER AND SON.

Though many youngsters of these times are of a contrary opinion, the average father is likely to know his son better than the average son is likely to know his father. This fact of human experience is very pointedly illustrated by disclosures recently made in Germany. Thirty-two years ago the former Kaiser thought his father, the Crown Prince, afterward Emperor Frederick, was a mollycoddle because of his humane and liberal views, which were strikingly un-Prussian and were perhaps largely due to the influence of his wife, the daughter of Queen Victoria of England. What the father thought of the son is of greater present interest. This comes to light through the publication of a letter written by Crown Prince Frederick on the subject of his son in 1886, after learning that the latter was planning to enter the Foreign Office.

Writing to Bismarck in opposition to the project, Crown Prince Frederick said his eldest son was "inclined to exaggeration and arrives at very rapid conclusions," adding: "His real knowledge is still defective and he lacks the necessary foundations. Later on he might be employed in one of the administration ministries. In view of the immaturity of my eldest son (then 28 years old), combined with his tendency to conceit, I must describe it as positively dangerous to bring him at once in contact with foreign questions." The last few words suggest a prophecy, in view of the world war which the man under discussion wilfully precipitated in 1914. The most execrated man of modern times is the inevitable outgrowth of what his own father knew him to be 32 years ago.

AN INSENATE OUTCRY.

The intelligent reader will be both amazed and amused by a letter published in the New York Sun as a specimen of a number of a similar character sent to that newspaper discussing the same subject. It begins: "Shame! shame! that Woodrow Wilson, President of the United States, and an elder in the Presbyterian Church, should stand for prohibition for America and for booze in France. What an inglorious spectacle he presents to the people of America in lifting his glass containing champagne at the banquet tendered him by the French government. What must we think of Brother Wilson, who, casting all prohibition propriety to the winds, boldly stands before the French people and drinks champagne. Shame! Shame!

The lady who sought relief from her intemperate if not incandescent wrath in this outburst must have foamed at the mouth or had a fit when a few days later the President not only dined on fifteen-million-dollar gold plate at Buckingham Palace but again "lifted his glass" full of the same bubbling liquid and, in response to courtesies in kind, proposed a toast to the King, Queen and people of Great Britain. Yet what would she and her kind have had him do? What else would they have advised? Possibly they would like him to have said: "George and Mary of England, I am shocked to find wine on your table. You are guilty of a great evil and of setting a monstrous example. For this thing called champagne is the real T. N. T., the real picric acid, the real deadly explosive that should be sunk to the bottom of the sea. I repudiate it as such now and here. I dash it down in your presence, and I will consent to drink your health only in pure water."

Had he done this there would indeed have been heard a cry of "shame" and justly, from the whole educated and enlightened world, however delighted certain narrow-minded fanatics may have been. For he would have thus shown himself to be not only a discourteous guest and a boor but a conceited fool. Merely to have declined to offer a responsive toast in the liquid provided at the banquet would have been an intolerable breach of good manners. This much was imperative whether he drank his own glass of champagne or not—and the accounts do not state that he actually did so, although it is probable that he did. No doubt the President believes in temporary prohibition as a war measure, but it does not necessarily follow that he is a teetotaler. He went to Europe to preach justice, democracy, and making the world safe from wars—not prohibition.

This insensate outcry is another startling symptom of the rapidly encroaching disease of intolerance which afflicts this country and threatens every American citizen more and more with an insupportable burden of sumptuary laws—utterly out of harmony with our free institutions which will bind him hand and foot. And why? Chiefly because the intolerant, joyless and fanatical ascetic is determined to shackle and regulate his neighbor.

An Unfamiliar Dish.

Speaking at a dinner, Senator Joseph E. Ransdell of Louisiana referred to the confusion into which nomenclature occasionally leads us, and told the following story as an illustration:

One afternoon two young women, one of them of literary bent, chanced to meet on a train, and after the ice was broken they exhaustively conversed on various topics dear to the feminine heart.

"By the way," remarked the literary one, finally side-tracking fashions and sweaters for the soldiers and introducing her favorite subjects, "do you care for Crabb's Tales?"

"I never ate one in my life," was the rather startling rejoinder of the other, "but I am just crazy over lobsters."—Philadelphia Telegraph.

Couldn't See Him.

During a hot march in Palestine a sturdy Scotch soldier, six feet in height and proportionately broad, found himself side by side with a bumptious little Englishman, who was five feet nothing.

It was a hot day and the Scot was greatly troubled with the midges. They buzzed around him all the time while the little Englishman seemed to be immune.

"The midges don't trouble me," said the little man, triumphantly. "I wonder why?"

"I daur say," he replied, "it's because they have na noticed ye yet!"—London Tit-Bits.

At Last It Came.

While his mother was away little Willie didn't say his prayers. When his mother came back from her visit there was a reckoning.

"Now, why did'nt you say your prayers, Willie?"

"Well, mother, it was like this. I forgot to say them the first night an' nothing happened. An' I didn't say them the next night, an' nothing happened; so I've made up my mind I'll never say them again if nothing happens."

And then something happened.—London Ideas.

The Right Sort.

Thinking he had few drops of German blood in him, William Strasburger pricked his great toe and it out. Then he applied for enlistment.

"How do you know that the blood you let out was German?" asked the sergeant.

"I pricked at the point furthest from my heart," replied the poetic young man.—Boston Transcript.

Edible Alarm Clock.

It was late in the afternoon when the Scotch minister arrived at the farmhouse. The housewife suggested that perhaps he would like a cup of tea before he began the "exercises." A REVITALIZED COMMERCE CHAMBER Definite Program and Substantial Program the Aim—Dean Johnson Meeting Tuesday a Forerunner of Others.

"The opportunity to welcome a guest of Dean Johnson's ability and reputation, the convenient hour, the informal character of the dinner, the moderate price and the plans for making everyone have a thoroughly good time make the Chamber of Commerce Dinner, which is to be held Tuesday evening at 6:30 in the Y. M. C. A. Building, characteristic of the kind of meetings which the Chamber of Commerce intends to hold regularly and frequently this year," said Secretary Hudson this morning

"We have two things in mind for the year's work of the Chamber of Commerce. One is the formulation of a specific and definite program of work and the making of solid and substantial progress in getting the things included in the program of work carried into practical effect.

"The other is the making of the Chamber of Commerce into a thoroughly vitalized membership organization. And the second is, perhaps, even more important than the first, for there is no limit to the things which can be accomplished for the civic, industrial and business welfare of Kingston by a body of several hundred representative men animated by a keen sense that the Chamber of Commerce is their organization through which they may work to make the peace and reconstruction achievements of Kingston parallel her accomplishments for the winning of the war.

"We have come to a year when patriotic service is primarily local community service. A re-vitalized Chamber of Commerce adequate to give practical expression and effect to all that is best in Kingston, is an indispensable agency for community service

The work to be done is a work, which requires no sacrifice in blood and little sacrifice in money. It is not 'to make the world safe for democracy,' but to make life more and more worth while in a nation and a city which have been made safe for democracy"

It is work which can be made to return almost immediately important values in the benefit to individuals and to trade industry.

It is however, strangely enough true, that these gains are sought to be made the sole motive power of Chamber of Commerce work.

Community service, however, can and should be thoroughly practical. Neither trade or industry can prosper permanently and fully unless a city is a good place in which to live and work and do business. Nor can substantial enterprises be attracted to a city unless that city is thoroughly alive in attention to the welfare of the community and of every person within the community.

Modern business requires community service and community service recognizes the need for furthering trade and industry From whatever angle it is approached, a Chamber of Commerce must stand first and foremost for the advancement of everything which makes life more worth while.

And no Chamber of Commerce can do this adequately unless it be thoroughly and continuously responsible to the will of the active and alert membership

And the membership cannot be active and alert unless it meets frequently. Out of frequent meetings grows loyalty to the organization, and knowledge of its problems and team work in determining and carrying out its policies.

The members' forum which is being worked out, will give an opportunity for the discussion of the problems of the Chamber and of the community, and will have the most intimate relationship to the every-day work of the Chamber of Commerce.

A number of other ladies who have themselves visited the Holy Land have been invited to join the party and give it the benefit of their own experiences. Preparatory to the journey Mrs. M. G. Holmes will conduct devotional exercises and on the return Miss Holmes will sing and a chorus of voices will render an Arabic Jubilee. All the ladies of the congregation are cordially invited to accept complimentary passes for the trip. Every thing will be furnished but sleepers.

Red Cross Sewing Tonight.

A good attendance of workers is hoped for at the Red Cross work rooms this evening to sew for the soldiers

Why should we denounce fault-finding because it is not constructive? All of us are continuously finding faults, some in jest, and on our success in finding the fault and destroying it depends mostly our successful development. So in the end it appears that fault-finding is essentially one of our most constructive activities. One of our most faults is the hypocritical practice of finding fault with fault-finding.—F. H. Young in Providence Journal.

GOWN FOR THE DEBUTANTE

This simple yet charming afternoon gown will be well received by the debutante. It is of navy chiffon, heavily beaded in iridescent blue and black beads. The underskirt is of black vel.

WINTER AND SPRING MODELS

Straight Lines and Trimmed With Fur; Jersey Cloth With Long, Tight Skirt.

Hudson seal is the most popular fur this season. Draped effects and coatees of seal, trimmed daintily with squirrel, are very beautiful. Mole and beaver still hold their own.

The winter suits are very stunning. They are being shown along straight lines and trimmed with fur.

And now comes the spring suit. Fashion says it will be of jersey cloth, with a long, tight skirt.

Winter coats, box effect, are being worn now, though coats are not so popular this season, many women preferring the winter suit to be worn later with their furs.

Suits without blouses seem to be just the thing now. Instead of a waist a vestee is worn, or in some cases a dainty piece of colored silk is tucked in to give the effect.

Winter coats for the children are made of bright-colored broadcloth, with the yoke waist.

The latest novelty in neckwear is an apron slipover made of georgette.

Filet and valenciennes lace now trim the daintier waists, while for every day we have striped dimity and batiste trimmed with tiny box plaits instead of the usual pin tucks.

A very popular shade this winter is nut brown.

While hitherto black has been tabooed for the young girl, many very beautiful and youthful dresses are being shown in black velvet and black satin. Most of the dresses have just a touch of trimming.

TRICOLETTE IS NOW TO FORE

Dress Material Wins Approval for Afternoon Frocks; Good for Wear Under Heavy Coat.

Tricolette has come very much to the fore as a dress material. A number of new afternoon frocks, on the order of a very beautiful model of black tricolette which Calot brought out last season, are being sponsored by well-known American designers, and these are particularly good for wear under a heavy coat, as they do not muss and are not so bulky as to distort the line of the outer garment. Heavy coarse jersey is also being used for frocks, and there is a new fishnet jersey which has just come from Paris and which promises to have quite a vogue. Among the novelties in the more formal silks are new metal brocades, the weaves of which are replicas of the coats of mail worn in medieval days. These are interesting and distinctively new.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

When dishes used for cooking have become discolored, rub them with damp salt until all stain is removed.

A marble boiled in milk, porridge, custards, etc., will automatically do the stirring as the liquid cooks, and so prevent burning.

Scatter salt on a carpet when sweeping, and you will not only find it has a cleansing effect but that it also keeps away moths.

Liquid ammonia is invaluable for washing silver, softening bath water, and producing a good lather when washing woolens.

Dissolve a teaspoonful of saltpeter in a cupful of cold water and throw over a scuttle of coal. The fire will be brighter and last longer.

If a fire has to be left unwatched for several hours put a handful of salt on the top of the coals. This will prevent the fuel burning away too quickly.

Always shrink wool to be used for darning purposes by holding the skein in the steam from a boiling kettle. Otherwise the wool will shrink and make a hole larger than the original one.

Some Rats.

Lenta makes the amazing estimate that the progeny of a single couple (of rats), if undestroyed, would number 20,000,000 in three years, and this number is even below the theoretic figures.—Scientific American Supplement.

FORT EWEN.

Fort Ewen, Jan. 6.—A meeting of the organized adult Bible class of the Methodist Episcopal Church will be held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Barry Mabie on Green street Tuesday evening.

A meeting of the official board of the Methodist Church will be held Wednesday evening at the parsonage.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Fowler of Broadway were guests of Mr. Fowler's sister, Mrs. J. Butler, in Hyde Park, Sunday.

The "Week of Prayer" will be observed in the Reformed Church this week every night except Saturday. This evening the subject is "Prayer —Intercession." Everyone is invited to this service at 7:30 o'clock.

A meeting of the Women's Foreign Missionary Society of the Methodist Church will be held Thursday afternoon at 3 o'clock at the home of Mrs. E. A. D. Foster on Broadway.

Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Terpening and daughter, and Miss Jennie Terpening, of Kingston, called on Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Van Leuven on Broadway on Sunday.

On account of the prayer service in the Reformed Church on Wednesday evening, Esopus Council, No. 42, Sons and Daughters of Liberty have called their meeting at 7 o'clock prompt, to enable those who wish to attend the week of prayer service on that night. Members will kindly consider the change of hour from 7:30 to 7 o'clock.

The Rev. Eugene A. Beckhaut, pastor of the Methodist Church, gave a very interesting and instructive sermon Sunday on "The Stewardship of Prayer." It is to be regretted that many more church members could not have heard the opening sermon in what is called the Centenary Movement, as the object is to lift Methodism to a new plane of spiritual vision and solidarity, from which it shall accomplish its part of the Christian conquest of the world

Mrs. Peter Tayer of Tilden street is visiting friends in New York city for a few days.

Mrs. J. Wesley Van Wagenen of Green street, who has been quite ill of influenza, is improving.

The community was shocked to hear of the sudden death of Libertus Van Keuren of Union Center. Mrs. Van Keuren was a former resident of this place and her many friends here sympathize with her in this her sore bereavement.

An entertainment will be given in the Methodist Church on Friday evening of this week, January 10, by the Ladies' Aid Society and all of the ladies are invited to be present.

SACRIFICES OF ARMY DOCTOR

Home Practice and Other Advantages Relinquished to Serve Country During the War.

One-fifth of the total number of physicians in the United States will have to enroll for military duty if this war continues for another year, observes Leslie's Weekly. All but a small percentage of them must enroll voluntarily. All but a small percentage of them have families to support and these and others are wholly dependent on the income of the head of the house for this support. The physician from 25 to 45 years of age, the age of greatest usefulness for military service, is at that critical period of his professional and financial development that two years of forced absence is liable to affect disastrously his whole career.

The change means, if there is no independent income, sacrificing of insurance, lapsing of the mortgage, withdrawing of children from school, a complete change of method of living, and great risk of returning after the war with a lucrative practice divided among the stay-at-homes. A law has recently been introduced in the senate by Senator Owen which provides an increased rank for medical officers of the reserve corps, that will in some way meet the financial burden of the volunteer doctor and will furnish him a rank equal to the dignity of his civil position.

Measuring Time.

The refinements of modern time-keeping are illustrated in an investigation recently carried out by F. D. Urie, under the direction of the United States naval observatory, to determine the "lag" between the Arlington and Great Lakes time signals, both of which are received by wire from the naval observatory and converted automatically into wireless signals. Between Washington and the Great Lakes station there are 800 miles of telegraph wire, involving several make-circuit relays. The lag between the two radio stations was found by a series of tests to average 0.065 second, with a probable error of 0.002 second, says the Scientific American.

Lafayette Flying Corps.

Considerable confusion exists in the minds of many persons about the difference between the Lafayette Escadrille and the Lafayette Flying corps.

This famous aeronautic body was the Section d'Aviation of the Legion Etrangere in the early days of the war. To mark the number of Americans who were sharing the dangers and victories the name was changed to the Franco-American Flying corps. But as the United States was now at war with Germany complaint was made that this was a breach of neutrality.

To avoid giving offense the name was changed to the Lafayette Flying corps, which is the present official designation.

Don't Tease Child.

Teasing has ruined the disposition of many a child. The parents are not likely to be guilty of such conduct, but older children in the family, or some other relative, may make the child's life utterly miserable by constant teasing. A thoughtless adult, intending to be playful, will keep a child struggling for some object, almost allowing him to get it over and over again, only to thwart the child's purpose, and so causing a wearing irritation.

IN THE CHICAGO TRENCHES.

Shulman Tired of Being Bombed and Jars Up Police.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Chicago, Jan. 6.—S. Shulman called at police headquarters early today and insisted that the police put a little more pep into their efforts to land a bomber who, during the past year, made four attempts to dynamite his home.

The fourth attempt made late Sunday night would have met with success but for Gustav Goetzsche, who, finding the bomb in Shulman's doorway, picked it up and tossed it into the street. The explosion that followed blew off the fingers on Goetzsche's left hand.

Shulman blames business enemies for the bombing attempts.

Queer.

Said the facetious feller: "A couple of dull kids will make any woman look smart—if they're on her feet."

OUR DAILY PATTERN.

2508—A Practical Design.

This model will make a cool and comfortable dress. It is composed of a separate guimpe that may be buttoned to the skirt, which is finished with a suspender waist. Lawn, crepe and batiste are nice for the guimpe, and the same materials may be used for the dress, which is good also for serge, gabardine, gingham, seersucker, chambray and linen.

The pattern is cut in 4 sizes: 4, 6, 8 and 10 years. Size 8 requires 2½ yards of 36-inch material for the dress and 1¾ yards for the guimpe.

A pattern of this illustration mailed to any address on receipt of 10 cents in silver or stamps by the Pattern Department, The Freeman, Rondout, N. Y. Be sure to state size wanted.

Catalogue Notice.

Send 10 cents in silver or stamps for our up-to-date fall and winter 1918-1919 catalogue, containing 550 designs of ladies', misses' and children's patterns, a concise and comprehensive article on dressmaking, also some points for the needle illustrating 24 of the various simple stitches all valuable hints to the home dressmaker.

WOUNDED SOLDIERS EDUCATION

To Fit Them For Civil Life By Board For Vocational Training.

The District Vocational Office of the Federal Board For Vocational Education with offices at 280 Broadway, New York City, are investigating and locating those men who were discharged from the army and navy because of injuries received in the line of duty as a soldier or sailor and who may be entitled to compensation under the War Risk Insurance Act and also entitled to the benefits of the Vocational Rehabilitation Act.

The Rehabilitation Act authorizes the Federal Board for Vocational Education to assist discharged rehabilitated soldiers and sailors in establishing themselves to their best advantage in civil employment. The Board has power to arrange and pay for courses of instruction for those men entitled to the same under the provisions of the Act.

The Act provides that if a man is unable to take up his previous employment because of disabilities incurred in service, he may receive, while in training under the Federal Board, either the same pay he was receiving on his last month of active service or the compensation to which he is entitled under the War Risk Insurance Act, whichever is the greater. Attention is called to the fact that all courses given by the Board for Vocational Education are planned for the particular man taking the course, with full knowledge of the man's disability, and with due consideration always given to his physical handicaps, and to his own desires for the future. If he desires to take advantage of the training courses offered by the board, they will forward a blank of questions to be filled out without delay by the disabled man and in this manner determine whether or not he is eligible for training. Even if the man is not eligible for training the board will be glad to assist him in any way possible in obtaining satisfactory employment.

The Rose's Name.

The name "rose" varies only slightly among different nations. The Romans called it rosa—a form adhered to in Italian, Portuguese, Spanish and Russian. In Polish it is roza, in Dutch roos, in Swedish ros, and in French, German and Danish rose.

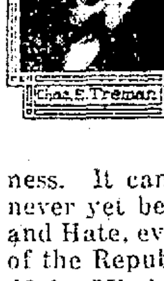

On Parting With Our Own War-Baby

¶This is the last issue of our war baby,—Keep Old Glory Waving. It was born masculine and kept its gender to the last.

John Mitchell

Arthur Williams

Chas. E. Treman

¶Its father never was a neutral.

¶We have yet to hear of a religious leader of any denomination in Germany throwing himself on his knees at the feet of his true Lord and Master and exclaiming for himself and his people.—Mea Culpa, Mea Culpa, Mea Maxima Culpa. As a Clearfield County (Pa.) farmer once said,—"it aint in 'em."

¶The Thief on the Cross didn't know how to express his contrite sorrow for his crimes, and they were venial compared to the Great Crime of Germany and her people; all he could say was, Lord, remember me when thou dost come into Thy Kingdom.

¶The Thief recognized in himself a sinner and said so in the only way he could. Germany bluffs to the last. By bluff she tries to make the peoples of the world believe she is an uncanonized saint. Out from the pits of her sinful stomach she cries: "Ye peacemakers, remember me when you come to the table:"—and to Hoover,—"Mighty Hoover, please feed me."—and shows her bluff and impenitence by sending to Hoover, as food beggars, some of the men who thought by starvation to weaken the beautiful resistance of the Belgian people.

¶If Hoover ever has any moral doubts about his attitude toward Germany he should speedily seek advice from Cardinal Mercier. Mercier's applied theology was one of the wonders of the war. It cared not where it hit, so long as it hit hard.

¶Prussian propaganda is not yet dead in this country. It still persists in the effort to make all of us anti-English. Like every propaganda of German birth it lacks even ordinary shrewdness. It cannot succeed for the reason that this country has never yet been committed to a policy of nursing old grudges; and Hate, even for the Germans, has not found root in the heart of the Republic.

¶John Mitchell, Arthur Williams and Charles E. Treman made good for the state and the city. They made good because of the earnest co-operation of their fellow members on the Board and the State Food Commission—Messrs. Charles A. Wieting and Dean Albert R. Mann. They made good because they were surrounded by men and women who had no thought of themselves, but of the work to be done.

¶To the editors, publishers, reporters and copy readers of New York State papers: Gentlemen, thank you. Without your encouragement public information for food work in this state could never have succeeded. That it has succeeded is not questioned, but its success is wholly yours.

¶And now a last word: the material thing, made of paper, ink, and iron, etc., which we reverently called Keep Old Glory Waving, is dead. But the spirit and the will to make the Flag of our Republic stand for the things the Fathers and their successors, the crusaders of 1917 and 1918, stood for,—that spirit and that will are deathless.

HER RING

By MARION C. LEESAM.

"Dick is leaving New York and coming home for a week's furlough," said Betty Saunders to her sister.

"I know it," said Jean, looking up from her knitting. "I was talking to his mother yesterday. It doesn't interest me, however."

"Oh, Jean, try to be nice to him this week. He's going South to learn to fly and then he's going to France. Why, if I were in your place I'd be planning to give him the best time while he is home. You can't do too much for those fellows."

"I know it," said Jean pensively, "but he did treat me so that night at the dance, just before he went away. He paid attention to that Wentworth girl half the night. Then he pretends he loves me. He doesn't know what love is. I'll never forgive him, either."

"I don't think he meant it," said Betty. "You probably imagined it. I know he's sorry you do not write him, because he writes the finest letters home to his mother. Besides, you'd go far and near to find as nice a fellow as Dick."

"Oh, Betty, do stop raving over him. I tell you I've changed entirely toward Dick. I think Jack Somers is more of a man than Dick ever thought of being."

With that, Jean picked up her knitting and angrily walked upstairs.

Meanwhile, Dick Fulton, comfortably settling himself in the Pullman bound for Boston, breathed a deep sigh, whether of relief no one knows. He was glad he was going home.

After squaring himself with his own conscience he settled himself for forty winks and knew nothing until he heard the porter cry, "Boston, all out!" He pulled himself together and, grabbing his grip, hurried out, searching anxiously for some one to meet him. "Of course Jean wouldn't be there," he argued to himself. Yet he half hoped she had forgiven him. He hurried up the platform and saw his mother, waiting for him. In back of her was Betty, but Jean was nowhere to be seen.

"Oh, Dick, I'm so glad to see you," said Betty. "Though you have only been away ten weeks it seems like a year."

"It seems like that to me, too," said Dick, piloting Betty on one side and his mother on the other. "I had hoped Jean would meet me, but I suppose that was too much to expect."

"I'm sorry," said Betty. "I tried to persuade her to come. I told her it was no time to be worrying over such petty things."

"You're right," said Dick, "It is foolish. What do you say if we stay in town and have lunch and go to a show?" Dick was bound he was going to forget things for once.

"I think I'll go home," said Mrs. Fulton. "You two go and have a good time."

After leaving Mrs. Fulton on the train Dick and Betty started for an evening's fun. First, they got tickets at one of the best theaters and then found a little cafe and had a nice dinner.

"Dick, I've been wondering about Jean. It's too bad things are this way. Can't something be done to fix it up?"

Dick looked at her earnest face, never before realizing how strikingly pretty Betty was. Then she had so much sense, too, even though she was only two years older than Jean. He puffed his cigar slowly, thinking very deeply.

"I'll tell you what we can do," he said with a happy thought. "Let's go and pick out a diamond for Jean. I'll take it to her and surprise her. I know she'll forgive me."

"That would be fine," said Betty, her face brightening.

"What will fit your hand will fit Jean's, won't it?" said Dick as they sat before the tray of dazzling stones, trying to pick out just the right one.

Betty was as happy as though it were for herself, and many people turned to admire the happy couple, and Dick certainly looked manly in his uniform. As he watched her a pang went through his heart. Here was a girl who cared and knew what love was. Finally they picked out the one that Betty declared was a "beauty," and Dick stuffed it in his pocket. Then they hurried to the theater.

"I know she'll love it," whispered Betty while they were watching the play.

"Do you think so?" said Dick. A queer feeling came over him as Betty leaned near him, enjoying herself to her heart's content. "Betty has always been a good friend of mine, but surely I'm not falling in love with her," he thought. He paid little attention to the play, as he was battling out a problem in his own mind.

When leaving Betty that night, after what she pronounced a dandy time, he took her hand in his and whispered: "Betty, I want you to have this," slipping the ring on her finger. "It was just meant for you. I noticed that in the jeweler's."

"Why, Dick," Betty faltered, "What about Jean?"

"She doesn't care for me, Betty, dear; not the way I want some one to care for me after I go away."

"I always liked you," said Betty, "but I never believed you thought of me in this respect."

"I never realized it until today, but now I know what you are going to mean to me," said Dick, tenderly, putting his arm around her.

"I'm so very happy," said Betty, pressing the ring to her lips.

Snakes in the Ocean.

There may or may not be such a thing as a sea-serpent, but there certainly are snakes in the ocean. There are numerous varieties of small snakes that live in all oceans; then there are the eels, of course, which go from the salt water to the fresh. In the waters around southern Asia there lives the banded sea snake, which has stripes around its body and broad tail, and can swim with great speed.

Point of Natural History.

Two small boys were awaiting their teacher on the sidewalk. One began to crawl on hands and knees, unmindful of clean white stockings, and was corrected by the other lad, but would not arise, as he said he was a lion. "Lions don't walk that way," said the second little fellow, "they walk on their fronts."

In Memoriam.

In loving memory of Cornelius R. Hicks, who died January 5th, 1918:
Just one year ago today since you left us and went away,
To that beautiful better land.
How lonely we have been, and we missed you so,
But sometime we'll understand.

We miss your cheerful and loving smile,
And your presence everywhere,
Our family circle is broken now,
For yours is a vacant chair.

But your memory we will always cherish,
Till we meet in the home up there,
Where sorrow and parting enter not;
And there'll be no vacant chair.
PARENTS, BROTHERS and SISTER.

In memory of W. Burton Kletha, who died October 2:
I can not say and I will not say
That he is dead. He is just away.
With a cheery smile and a wave of the hand
He has wandered into an unknown land.
And left us dreaming how very fair
It needs must be, since he lingers
there.
And you—oh you, who the wildest
yearn
For the old time step, and the glad return
Think of him faring on, as dear
In the love of there, as the love of here.
Think of him still as the same, I say
He is not dead—He is just away.

Music's Value in Home.

Music is so general in its inspiring appeal to our better emotions that we cannot afford to neglect its cultivation in the home. Few mothers realize the importance of training and association in this direction. One ventures to say that many men and women have been impelled to right living and accomplishment of high ideals by the intangible strain of music that runs like a bright thread of sentiment through the stress of busy days. Mechanical piano players and other ingenious musical devices threaten less personal participation in a one-time pleasure.

Discovery of Rubber.

The rubber tree was discovered by a Jesuit missionary, Father Manuelde Esperanza. He found it while on one of his apostolic journeys among the Cambebas Indians of South America and gave it the singular name of the seringueira, because he remarked that the savages used the sap of this tree, which hardens quickly, to make rude bottles that were shaped like a syringe.

INCH ICE FORMS ON HUDSON RIVER

Real Winter Weather Visited Kingston Over Sunday—River and Creek Filled With Floating Ice—Transport Still Running.

Real winter weather visited Kingston over Sunday and from indications today expects to spend the remainder of the winter here. So low did the thermometer drop that an inch of ice formed in the Hudson river, but the ferry Transport had no difficulty in plowing through the ice. This morning the river was filled with floating ice.

The Rondout creek was also frozen over, but the lower creek is filled with floating ice due to the fact that the famous Skillypot is still running and that the Transport is making regular trips.

The tug Rob is also in commission and it was expected that this afternoon she would tow a newly launched barge from the Hiltebrant yard down the river where the barge would be met by a tug from New York and towed to that city.

The snow fall followed as it was by a cold snap has formed an excellent covering and sleighing was enjoyed by many Sunday with horse and cutter. The hills were also crowded with coasters today.

The police department thermometer registered at 6 o'clock Sunday morning 10 above zero and this morning at the same time 14 above. This thermometer registers from 6 to 8 degrees warmer than other thermometers about town, due to the fact that it is hung in a sheltered position.

The Poughkeepsie is still in commission and running between Rondout and New York.

BILL TO FEED EUROPE REPORTED

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Washington, Jan. 6.—Although reporting favorably to the house the president's proposal for the use of $100,000,000 of American money for feeding European peoples outside of Germany, the house appropriations committee this afternoon refused to place the money in the president's hands to be used at his discretion, without any time or other limitation as suggested by Secretary of the Treasury Glass.

Considerable discussion ensued as to the wisdom of the proposed expenditure of such a large sum for the purpose the president desired, but it was finally agreed that the United States was bound to furnish food for her allies in peace as well as in war.

The committee, stipulated, however, that the money should be used only until June 30, 1919, or the end of the present fiscal year.

Fewer Horses.

Despite the growth in population and increased areas under cultivation, the horse population of Los Angeles county, California, is now less than one-half as much as in 1900. The automobiles and mototrucks have increased from 6 to 79,146. The 47,000 horses in the county in 1900 were valued at $5,000,000. In 1910 the drop in number was to 31,000, and in the ensuing six years to 20,000. The present automobile valuation is nearly $100,000,000. Excellent road conditions are considered largely responsible for the above figures.

Positive Signs.

Even some public signs come direct to the point. They do not waste any time in wondering how the reader will feel about it.

In a garage is posted:

"Don't smoke around the tank. If your life isn't worth anything, gasoline is!"

Eyes Had to Be Blue.

Blue-eyed babies always claim a preponderance of admirers. The fact has just again been emphasized—this time at Hampstead, England. It was announced in the press that the town of ... had a "bonny blue-eyed baby" for adoption, and straightway 350 would-be adopters wrote to secure it. Unfortunately it was found that the infant's eyes had been wrongly described. The eyes were not blue, after all, and when they heard of this some of the ladies withdrew their offers.

Goodness.

I think that most of my readers will agree with me that, notwithstanding the all-prevalent evil which in a thousand shapes haunts the footsteps of our race, good is still the mightiest power in the world, and, if its aimless strength could be concentrated and directed, would go far towards effecting a reformation of the world.—Sir H. Rider Haggard.

KINGSTON MAY BE AIR MAIL STATION

Mayor Canfield Has Filed Application For Chicago-New York Planes to Stop Here—Extension Depends on Money Appropriated.

Mayor Canfield has made application to Second Assistant Postmaster General Otto Praeger to have Kingston designated as a postal station in connection with the Aerial Mail Service. Mail has been successfully carried between New York and Washington during the past year by aeroplanes. A new route was started by the postal department in the latter part of December from New York to Chicago by way of Cleveland. Mayor Canfield received two letters from the Aerial League of which he is a member, which were carried from Chicago to New York on the first trip made over this route. One of the envelopes was stamped with the seal of the city and the mayor's signature and returned to the league to become a permanent part of its collection of aerial exhibits. Each letter required a six cent aerial postage stamp. The postal department intends to start another route soon from Boston to Chicago by way of Albany.

Assistant Postmaster General Praeger informed Mayor Canfield that the extension of the aerial service this year will depend upon the amount appropriated for such purpose. The bill is now before congress and such amount will be so expended as shall be included in it. The mayor does not believe that aerial service will come to Kingston this year, but believing it will come within the next several years, deemed it advisable to make application at this time.

CO. M RECEPTION FOR SERVICE MEN

A performance and reception that will linger in local memories as the most spectacular and greatest of all entertainments will be given to the soldiers and sailors returned from service and their wives and sweethearts by Company M. on Wednesday evening, January 22, in the armory.

Nothing will be spared by the home company in expense or elaboration to give the returning boys a celebration of welcome back to their "old home town" that they will remember and talk about for years to come when all is said and done. Their untiring efforts to welcome the men home with a fitting reception have resulted at this early date in the completion of nearly the entire program which represents a collection of acts that include the best in the professional theatrical world. After the show there will be dancing with the best obtainable music affording every one an opportunity of meeting their friends of before the war.

Every man that is home in uniform will be welcome with a lady companion and may obtain their tickets at the armory upon presenting their name prior to January 22. The families of the boys still overseas will be entitled to two tickets of admission and it is requested that they hand their names in at the armory as early as possible.

On the night of the reception the doors of the armory will be closed promptly at 7:45 and this will necessitate the early arrival of all of the invited men and their families, the performance starting at 7:30.

The final figures for sales of W. S. S. in city of Kingston during 1918 reached the magnificent total of $471,654.50.

The pledges in the June drive were under $190,000, so Kingston has again done itself proud by largely oversubscribing amount pledged.

This city is also one of the few in the state to reach a quota of $18.87 per capita. $20 per capita was the maximum quota and $10 the average reached.

We are delighted with the result and extend our sincere thanks to the people of Kingston, the teams, captains, chairmen and privates and officers of the War Savings Army.

This should cause great rejoicing as our city has again "gone over the top" in upholding our soldiers and sailors while at war.

January 6th, 1919.

Hon. William C. DeWitt, City Chairman, War Savings Committee.

My dear Postmaster:

I received your letter and report showing that the citizens of Kingston have invested a total of $471,654.50 in War Savings Stamps, being a per capita sum of $18.87. I desire to officially congratulate County Chairman Brinnier and yourself as city chairman for this splendid result.

This is another indication and further proof of the loyalty of the people of our city and of their sustaining position behind our government and our boys who have been at the front. The most practical way our people could convey their kind thoughts to them was by their maximum support of the various contributing and investing campaigns which they have done.

Everyone in the city must thrill with pride as each of these efforts go through with success. Certainly the various workers in the drives have felt it and it is worth all the labor and time given. A whole volume could not tell of the unselfish work and labor given by our people during the war. Full and complete credit can not be given. Unfortunately individual thanks cannot be rendered in each case. Yet the pride with which we have witnessed the success of all these campaigns has been thanks in sufficiency.

I desire to express my gratefulness in behalf of the city for the consistent and persevering work of yourself and the county chairman and all workers under many difficulties and for the successful result accomplished.

Respectfully,
PALMER CANFIELD, JR.,
Mayor.

Good Explanation.

After looking over a vacant house with his parents, Willie, aged six, heard them discussing the rooms. All the rooms were immense and rather dark, with the exception of the dining room, which was very small and naturally lighter than the others. Willie said: "Yes, I guess the dining room was the lightest because it was closest to the windows."

ROOSEVELT DEAD

the early presidential career of Colonel Roosevelt was his action in threatening to send a fleet of American warships into South American waters if the German government did not immediately withdraw men of war they had sent to enforce a claim against the Venezuelan government.

Among the other achievements of President Roosevelt's first term were the passage of the Hepburn rate bill clarifying the railroad situation; the passage of the safety appliance act, the passage of the employers' liability act and the prosecution of the Northern Securities Company. During this suit bitter vituperations were used against the colonel by men of wealth throughout the country and the president became known as "Terrible Teddy" and "The Trust Buster."

It was during Colonel Roosevelt's first term that the famous "Ananias Club" was formed, to which he designated for membership most of the prominent men with whom he had controversies. The colonel's handling of domestic problems was no less vigorous that the development of international issues. It was largely through the president's intercession that the Russo-Japanese war was brought to a close by the peace treaty at Portsmouth.

The antagonists of Colonel Roosevelt made much capital of the revelation that during the panic of 1907 he authorized the absorption of the Tennessee Coal and Iron Company by the United States Steel Corporation. Colonel Roosevelt defended this on the ground of public interest.

Colonel Roosevelt reorganized the consular service and worked hard for the development of the trade with the Philippines. Through his efforts several arbitration treaties were negotiated and the financial affairs of the Dominican republic were reorganized.

The former president was a great phrase maker. One that he originated was "fight race suicide." He advocated big families.

Colonel Roosevelt had been in bad health for years and only his iron constitution held him up. Early in 1918 a series of internal maladies began to develop. His trouble was first reported to be a combination of sciatica and lumbago coupled with a touch of erysipelas.

In February of last year, following his removal to the Roosevelt Hospital, the colonel was found to be suffering from an abscess behind the tympanums of both ears and an operation was performed which was pronounced successful. He returned to his Oyster Bay home on March 4 but has since been in constant pain. In November he again entered the hospital suffering from rheumatism and ear trouble but returned home the day before Christmas saying he felt "bully." However, the former president had lost his hearing in the left ear.

On June 9 last, while on a speaking tour the colonel was stricken at St. Louis. His ailment was first thought to be erysipelas but was later diagnosed as a recurrence of the Brazilian fever, contracted on his exploring in South America. It settled in his left leg.

Colonel Roosevelt was a voluminous writer, among his books being: "America and the World War," "Winning of the West," "History of the Naval War of 1812," "Ranch Life and Hunting Trail," "Life of Gouverneur Morris," "The Rough Riders," "Hunting Trips of a Ranchman," "The New Nationalism," "Fear God and Take Your Own Part," "History of New York," "Through the Brazilian Wilderness," and "An Autobiography."

High School News Notes.

The members of the High School Alumni are planning to place a memorial tablet in the building in honor of the boys who have paid the supreme sacrifice in the Great European War "Over There." The boys are: Leonard Woodrow, Ulysses French, Aubrey Arnst, John Joyce, and Geoffrey Strugnell. The first four named were very active in athletics while at school, especially Joyce who was an all-star athlete. He played on the base-ball, foot-ball and basket-ball teams and was captain of the 1915-16 basket-ball team which went through the season with but one defeat. This team was the best that the school has had since it opened. During the last Alumni meeting the prospects of raising the money for this memorial were discussed by the members present. In the meantime, four boys who formerly attended school and played basket-ball with Joyce, Johnson, Palisi, Dolson, and Kiernan volunteered to play a game of basket-ball with the High School Varsity for the benefit of this fund. The fifth position will be filled by the spirit of Joyce, who is now resting peacefully "Somewhere in France." They intend to play this way, out of respect for him and have not thought of honor or victory over the High School team. No decision has been reached as to when the formal opening will be made, so watch the paper for further details. Anyone may help if they care to do so.

Next Friday night the Saugerties High School is going to send the Varsity and Midget teams down here so that the local boys may get some practice for the future. About a month ago, the teams from here journeyed to Saugerties and inflicted an excellent double defeat. Every one is invited to come and see Kingston trim Saugerties worse than they ever have before. After the game the High School students, and members of the Alumni will dance to the music furnished by Warner's three piece orchestra.

Bracelets for Lunatics.

Bracelets have been worn from immemorial, but few wearers of golden bands of the present day, know that they were once used to distinguish the insane. Before lunatics were confined to asylums they were an article for distinction.
